Major-General Curtess, C.B., C.M.G., who has died at Tenby at the age of 71, formerly commanded the Western Coast defences. He served throughout the South African War, and was mentioned in despatches.

we also issued a strongly worded intimation to all other countries that any interference on their part in the domestic affairs of Egypt or aggression upon her territory would be regarded as an "unfriendly act," that is to say an act which would be resisted to the point of war. It will be seen therefore that the assumption of a protective role over foreigners in Egypt and the warning to other countries to stand clear were complementary acts which imposed on this country a great responsibility. Whether that responsibility ought to have been taken or not, is beside the point, and the question does not now arise. All that is relevant at the moment is that Great Britain has undertaken to protect foreign interests in Egypt, and that the Public Assemblies Bill fathered by Nahas Pasha and the extremists, was deliberately calculated to render impossible the due fulfilment of that undertaking being carried out. Despite the Foreign Secretary's repeated protests this Bill had been pushed through all its stages and was to go before the Egyptian Senate last Monday for ratification. The British Ultimatum which was handed in on Sunday night was therefore well-timed. It gave the Egyptian Government three days in which to climb down with what grace it could, and in order to show that business was meant warships from the Mediterranean Fleet were despatched to an unknown destination which is now known to have been Egypt. The effect of the Ultimatum was instantaneous. It shocked the Nationalist extremists to their senses, and twenty-one hours before the time appointed for the Ultimatum to expire the Egyptian Government had handed in a reply which was tantamount to a surrender. It expressed compliance with the British request, and gave an assurance that the Assemblies Bill would not be proceeded with during the present session. Time alone will show whether the Egyptian Nationalists have in mind to try their game of bluff again and revive this Bill at some future date. Sir Austen Chamberlain has borne this possibility in mind, and in a final Note has made it clear in terms that do not admit of misrepresentation, to quote the words of the official text, that Great Britain will not at any time allow its vital interests in Egypt to be jeopardised in any way. Let us hope that the candid exchange of views has cleared the air, and that it will bear fruit in a closer understanding and a realisation by the Egyptian people that the friendly co-operation of Great Britain is of infinitely greater importance to them than an illusory independence which would leave them defenceless against foreign aggression from any quarter.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S CARE.

Statements made at yesterday's meeting of the Devon Education Committee should clear the air of any misunderstandings that may have occurred in regard to the charges made for treatment at the Princess Elizabeth Orthopædic Hospital. Sir Henry Lopes regretted the publicity which had been given in the Press to this matter, but we are not sure that that publicity was not an appreciable help rather than a hindrance, for after all it brought into focus a good deal of vague complaints that were floating about, and perhaps hastened the process of putting the matter right so as to prevent the undue spreading among parents of a feeling of injustice done. That certain over-charges were made is admitted, though, according to Mr. Batting, only one case in thirty had to be adjusted. The fault lay partly with the County Council, but apparently the parents themselves were also to blame inasmuch as they did not make their circumstances known in a sufficiently clear way. If they still consider that they have a grievance all they have to do is state their case fairly, and it will be sympathetically considered. That came to light when the charges as reasonable as possible is shown by the figures which Sir Henry Lopes presented yesterday. Of 55 children admitted to the Hospital 44 went in either free of charge at what might be called cost price. Only in eleven cases were charges of over five shillings (and under a pound) made, and in only four cases did the parents have to be in comfortable circumstances, and many of them had offered to pay the sum authorised. Figures of admissions to the clinics also show a similar care to make the charges correspond with the ability to pay. The fact that the Hospital is run on a no profit, no loss, basis, should be an important consideration, and they will be dealt with as fairly as circumstances admit.

GREAT BRITAIN AND EGYPT.

The publication yesterday of the full text of the concluding correspondence between the British and Egyptian Governments marks, let us hope, the end of the crisis which has been brewed for over two months and which came to a head on Sunday with the issue of an ultimatum to the Cairo Government on the subject of the Public Assemblies Bill, which, as Sir Austen Chamberlain's protest, it was preparing to push through its concluding stages on to the Statute Book. For his firm handling of a delicate situation the Foreign Secretary is to be congratulated. By his firmness he has turned what looked like being an ugly situation into a promising one, for there is reason to hope that as a result of the crisis of the past few days the Nationalist extremists of Egypt will at least have learnt that the British Government, whilst having no intention of interfering in purely domestic affairs of the country, is not going to allow itself to be bluffed out of the position defined by the Declaration of Independence which in 1922 marked the end of the Protectorate declared during the European War. In order to understand what the recent trouble has been about it is necessary to go back to that Declaration and particularly to the four Reserved Points on which it was founded. These ensured the security of communications of Egypt, and the defence of the Suez Canal; the defence of Egypt against foreign aggression; the protection of foreign interests and minorities in Egypt; and British control of the Sudan. All these have been fiercely denounced by Nahas Pasha, the present Prime Minister, who, following the rejection of the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty proposals made by the British Government, succeeded Zaghlul Pasha in the leadership of the extreme Egyptian Nationalists in March. What Nahas Pasha and his followers have stood for is the complete separation and independence of Egypt, and it was in pursuance of this policy that they pushed forward the Public Assemblies Bill which, if it became law, would have so undermined the authority of the police in the event of disturbances as to lead, possibly, to grave complications between this and other Foreign Powers. It is important to remember at this juncture that when we undertook the protection of Egypt in 1922 and guaranteed the security of foreigners in that country,

Funeral of Archdeacon of Plymouth

REPRESENTATIVE ATTENDANCE

The funeral took place, on Wednesday, within a few miles of his birth-place, of the Ven. Ernest Frederick Newman, Archdeacon of Plymouth, and Vicar of Marystowe, whose death took place at the Royal Devon and Exeter Hospital last Saturday, following a seizure in a train. He was laid to rest in Marystowe Churchyard.

Deceased was on his way back from the meeting of the Church Assembly, which on Friday gave its vote on the Revised Prayer-book. In company with the Lord Bishop of the Diocese and other clergymen, Archdeacon Newman left Waterloo Station at 6 p.m., and about an hour later was seized with a sudden illness. When the train reached Salisbury an urgent message was sent to Exeter for an ambulance to be in readiness. On arriving at Queen-street Station the Ven. Archdeacon was conveyed to the hospital, where he died. The Bishop of Exeter remained at the hospital, excepting for a brief period, and was present at the end. Death is attributable to heart failure following the seizure.

Mr. Newman, who had been Archdeacon of Plymouth since 1920, was also Vicar of Marystowe and Rector of Coryton, Devonshire. Before he was born 68 years ago, his father being then rector of the parish. Rupert Newman (Vicar of Gillingham), and a third son who is a master at Marlborough.

In the Church, the service was conducted by the Bishop of Exeter, the lesson was read by the Bishop of Plymouth, and at the graveside the committal portion of the service was conducted by the Rural Dean (Rev. J. Sharpe), the actual committal prayer being read by the Archdeacon's eldest son, Rev. Guy F. Newman, Vicar of Lifton.

EMPIRE MARKETING BOARD AND ENGLISH FARMER.

To the Editor of the "Western Times."

Sir,—In your issue of the 27th ult., reporting the Sidmouth Urban District Council meeting, it is stated that "objection was made to granting the Empire Marketing Board a poster site in the town by Mr. Lancaster Smith, who declared the board was detrimental to the English farmer. May I point out that what I really said was there was some criticism that certain advertisements for Colonial produce were detrimental to the interests of home farmers. After seeing the design of the proposed advertisement, I agreed that the design submitted would not be detrimental. Lest my protest at the Council meeting should be misunderstood, I shall be glad if you can publish the following extract from the N.U.F. Memorandum on Agricultural Policy which appears in the Year Book for 1928:—

"An Imperial Economic Committee has been appointed to make recommendations in respect to the utilisation of the Government grant of £1,000,000 per annum to foster the marketing of Empire produce in Great Britain. Although a part of the Empire so close to us as the Irish Free State is accorded representation of its interests on the Committee, the food producers, of Great Britain are shut out from that Imperial conclave, and must content themselves with helping as taxpayers to underwrite their own subsidy by assisting their overseas competitors."

HOSPITAL WEEK AT TIVERTON.

Market day visitors helped the Hospital Week effort considerably. Labels for motorists' windscreens were on the garages and parking places. The V.A.D. of the Red Cross Society had a flag stall at the market entrance, and were busy regarding the new weekly collection scheme and the need for increasing the subscriptions was distributed, and collectors were zealously plied amongst the shoppers. Ladies in their nurses' costumes formed an unusual note for market day. Among those present were: Mrs. Masland and Misses Pierce, M. L. Gregory, O. Carew and Miss and Nurses Pitman. Baker. Expenditure at the Hospital last year was £2,495. Income by £495.
